Iron Age archaeology
Archaeological Impact Assessments
GIS
Museology

- An investigation with the Pilanesberg National Park, North West Province, as the locale of this project, has as its main aim to locate, document, classify and establish a chronology of Iron Age settlements, structures and artefacts.

- Iron Age farming societies of the Waterberg: exploring the roots of black South Africans

- The archaeology of Melora Hill and Melora Saddle, two Iron Age farmer sites in Lapalala Wilderness, Limpopo. This project is undertaken in partnership with the Waterberg Biosphere, which was officially approved and proclaimed by UNESCO and the South African government in 2001. In view of the renewed interest in the educational use and tourism potential of archaeological sites, investigations are under way that will ensure that the research will, directly or indirectly, benefit local communities in the respective areas.
